“We appreciate the support that The Royal Bank of Scotland has provided, in order for us to fulfil our plans to regenerate the historic Wirral site. Trust and regular communication are key when arranging a complex financial deal, we had both of these with the bank.” Gerry White one of the key Players in the Stanton Land and Marine Finance Consortium

The Royal Bank of Scotland backs Mersyside Business Consortium

Stanton Land & Marine Finance have been set up as a consortium to finance the exciting new regeneration project at the former Cammell Laird site in Birkenhead. The four key players in the consortium, who brought a wealth of experience to the project included; Gerry White, a local businessman, David Day, Managing Director of Wirral based Warrant Distribution, Mike Ryder, property developer and Captain Bill McDonald, owner of Stanton Marina.

The Royal Bank of Scotland provided a flexible funding package to the consortium to help meet their business goals. The bank understood the critical requirement of knowing the local market place in the property sector.

Across Merseyside, Cheshire and North Wales, the Commercial Banking team has built up a detailed understanding of the specifics of the property market. Not only do they get to know the trends and values, but also develop long-term personal relationships with the key businesses involved. In addition, the bank recognises the need to foster close ties with the most experienced property professionals, specialist lawyers, surveyors and property agents working in the area.

Barry Pearson, Director, Commercial Banking, The Royal Bank of Scotland comments, “As a relationship bank, we are focused on providing innovative and flexible financial solutions for our customers allowing them to deliver their business objectives.”
